CODES USED IN THE INVENTORY

- SERIAL NUMBER Every aircraft has its own unique serial number. For B-24s the serial number begins with either 42- or 44- indicating the year of the contract, not the year the aircraft was manufactured. When the serial number is painted on the tail of the aircraft the first "4" is omitted because it's always the same number. Thus, 44-41114 would be painted 41114. Each plane has only one serial number, which never changes.
- BLOCK NUMBER - In three parts.
 Model Number - Self evident, model numbers, for example D, J, L, & M, indicate improvements over the previous model
 Block Number - Block numbers are individual aircraft orders, each group built according to specific requirements. One block could have a few aircraft, or a few hundred Manufacturer - Indicates where the aircraft was built (See codes below)
- PROJECT NUMBER A "shipping order", which could include one plane, many planes or equipment. A project number with only five numbers indicated original aircraft that formed the group. Project numbers ending in -R were later replacements. (Project numbers beginning with "92" indicate aircraft originally assigned to the 8th Air Force and later transferred to the Fifteenth Air Force)
- FINISH In this inventory there are only two codes: OD indicated olive drab while NM indicated natural metal finishes. Starting around November 1944 some aircraft were painted grey for night missions (Lone Wolf ships)
- SQUADRON Obvious
- A/C CODE Numbers painted on the fuselage of the plane, which indicated the squadron. During most of the war these numbers changed frequently. Starting in March 1945 all numbers were standardized
- DATE ASSIGNED Usually date assigned to the 451st, but could also be the received date at Gioia if the first date is unknown.
- AIRCRAFT NAME Obvious
- DISPOSITION The disposition was the reason the aircraft was written out of the Fifteenth Air Force inventory. Codes used in this column are listed below.
- DATE The effective date of the disposition.
- MACR A MACR was a Mission Air Crew Report. It was written to describe what is known about the fate of the crew. MACRs are not about the aircraft itself and can cause some confusion if the crew and aircraft are from different squadrons.
- ACCIDENT REPORT The first part of an accident report number is the date of the accident using a fiscal year beginning on July first. The second part is the order in which the accidents occurred. Accidents in the US started with number 1 each day. Accidents outside the US started with 500 each day. Thus, the third accident outside the US on June 30, 1944 would be number 44-6-30-503. However, because of the fiscal year, the third accident outside the US on the very next day (July 1, 1944) would be written 45-7-1-503. The pilot's name is also given and can be used to search for a particular accident.
- REMARKS Anything of value that doesn't fit in the other columns.
